Can't Build in Sullivan County

Public Service Commission Denies Application of Company to Construct Electric Lines on Ground—It Has Too Many Other Powers.

Albany, March 2.—The Public Service Commission today denied the petition of the New York-New Jersey Super Power Connecting Corporation, a New Jersey corporation, for authority to exercise franchises and begin construction of an electric distributing system to serve the towns of Cochecton, Lumberland, Trusten and Highland, Sullivan county. The commission based its action on the belief that the petitioning corporation was not an electrical corporation under the meaning of the laws of this state and that therefore it could not exercise the privileges of such a corporation.

The commission believed that under the provisions of its charter the corporation might engage in any mercantile business, carry on a stock brokerage business, or issue its bonds, debentures or other obligations for purposes wholly foreign to the purposes and wholly beyond the power and scope of business in which any electrical corporation of the state of New York may engage. The commission believed that the company's broad powers would make it a business corporation as such corporations are organised and exist under our laws rather than an electrical corporation, and that as such it has not power to receive or exercise the rights or privileges of an electrical corporation in this state.

Don't dope YOUR COUGH

It is not wise to use remedies which depend upon "dope" such as narcotics, chloroform, cannabis or tar products. They may stop your cough temporarily by numbing the tissues, as most cough mixtures do, but this is not enough.

The inflamed air passages must be soothed naturally, the germ-laden mucus loosened and expelled in order to effect a lasting recovery.

PERTUSSIN assists Nature to accomplish these results in a remarkably short time—and it is absolutely harmless.

Sun Helps Foods To Be Used Well

Ithaca, March 2.—"Expose the childrens' skin to the sun if you want them to get the most from their food," said Flora Rose, director of the state college of home economics here in a recent address to the homemakers of the state.

"Sound bodies are worth our attention because they are within the reach of everyone," stated Miss Rose. "But to have them, the environment must be carefully regulated. We must have correct food to build and support our bodies, plenty of fresh air and sunshine, and protection from disease.

"Though the diet is only one factor in right nutrition, it is one of the most important. Food must do three things: Supply energy, build bone and tissue. Two of the most important elements for bone are lime and phosphorus, but these cannot work together to do the body the greatest good without the help of sunlight.

"Certain foods," Miss Rose explained, "are worked upon by the sun in such a way that they are able to help the body absorb the important ultra-violet rays from the sun. These foods are called 'activated,' and to be strong and healthy we must eat these activated foods or activate the foods after they are in our bodies by exposing our bodies to the direct rays of the sun.

"The most important of these foods are cod liver old, milk and eggs. The cows and hens which produce the milk and eggs must have plenty of fresh air and sunshine if their products are to be valuable in this way. Such green vegetables as lettuce and spinach are also activated. In the winter when they cannot be had, a teaspoonful or tablespoonful of cod liver oil every day is good for us."

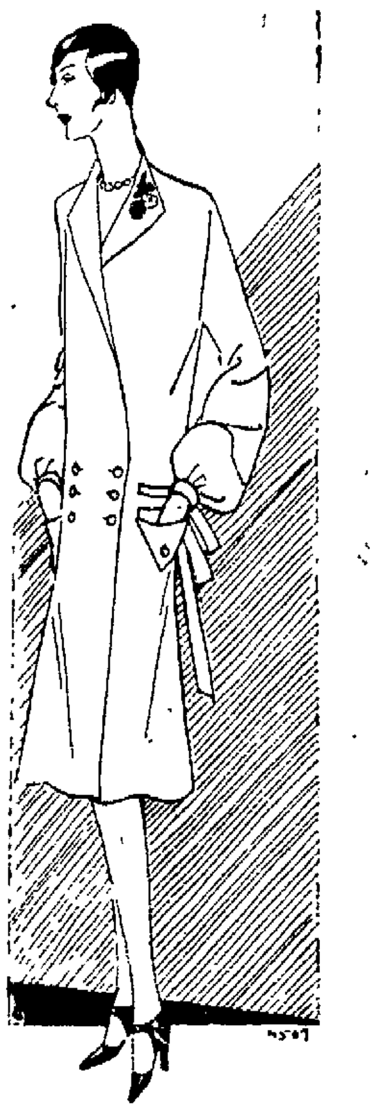
THE CLOTH FROCK IS THE TRAVELERS' FAVORITE AND FAR FROM IGNORED BY STAY AT HOMES.

Certainly one sees many more cloth dresses than in past seasons. To head the list there is of course jersey, any traveler no matter in which direction she is headed must realize the preference accorded to this fabric by those who have the wanderlust. To and fro to Europe and all over it, for that matter, were found jersey clad hordes, and now en route to Palm Beach, it stands out again as the fabric most in evidence.

One does not of course have to keep moving to wear jersey, or to see cloth frocks. Miss Manhattan wears them and what is more has formed the cozy habit of lining her coat with cloth, some fur coats even having a cloth lining. This is of course due entirely to fashion for there is no climatic difference to account for the cloth frock or its sister in warmth, the velvet one.



Beige Twill Makes This New and Practical Coat Dress With Double-Breasted Front and Balloon Sleeves.

Another detail rather conspicuous wherever one's tent is pitched is that even crepe dresses have been designed to give them a certain body, tucking for instance being responsible to a certain degree for this effect. The feeling is in short entirely away from transparency excepting in its proper time and place, the evening, and late afternoon. It seems difficult for designers at present to relinquish that smart tailored touch which adds not only distinction but cost to a frock.

The popularity of the two-piece costumes being everywhere conceded naturally gives rise to the conviction that the two-piece suit has an excellent chance to succeed this spring. The dress and coat have had so little competition that one feels there should be a lively response to the suit, which is the "something different" one always finds an attraction.

FOODS THAT ARE LIKED

For a change when nothing seems to appeal to the taste try:

Stuffed Baked Potatoes.—Cut a core with an apple corer from the center of good sized potatoes and insert a roll of bacon, stop the end with a cork of the potato and bake until well done. Small sausages may be served in this way, adding variety.

Chicken Soup.—Take the neck, wing tips and feet of one or two chickens, cover with cold water and bring to the simmering point. Simmer for several hours, then remove the bones, strip off all the meat and return it to the soup. Serve with a little rice or thickened with a tablespoonful of flour and butter. Serve with small squares of bread fried in butter or buttered and browned in the oven. Scald the chicken feet and remove the skin before using them for soup. They contain, with the bones, sufficient gelatin to use as aspic for a salad, if not used as soup.

Minute Pudding.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter with two of flour and when well blended add a cupful of milk, a little salt, cook until smooth and thick and serve with sugar and butter as pudding or with diced bacon in a white sauce, as a hot dish for luncheon or supper. The bacon should be cooked crisp and brown before adding to the white sauce.

Grated Carrot Salad.—Grate two small-sized carrots, one apple and add one-half cupful of finely minced celery, a bit of minced parsley and a tablespoonful of grated onion; add a good salad dressing, season well and serve on lettuce.

Green peas cooked, a few chopped peanuts and one or two sour pickles finely minced, adding salad dressing will make another good salad.

INTERESTING LECTURE OF DR. ROSELLI.

The subject of Dr. Roselli's lecture given on Friday afternoon at the lecture room of the Fair Street Reformed Church under the auspices of the Junior League was "Seven Centuries of Ultra Individualistic Literature in Italy."

Dr. Roselli considered Italian literature as individualistic rather than individual and therefore dynamic and eternal. It was not founded on any school nor can it be classified or pigeon-holed. Where any of its outstanding writers have had followers the following has been miserable for the reason that in the great writers the very summits had been reached.

Dr. Roselli stated that this great Italian literary period had begun just seven hundred years ago with St. Francis of Assisi, leader and pioneer of the ultra-radical spirit of Christianity. He was really the first writer in the Italian language. He had had no followers nor could he be imitated.

KINGSTON, N. Y., MARCH 2, 1926.

WASHINGTON AND SLAVERY.

The surprising assertion has recently been made that George Washington "left the largest quantity of manuscripts in the handwriting of any man who ever lived"—in addition to diaries, account books, etc., there being "upwards of 20,000 letters." One of Washington's letters recently published is interesting as showing how greatly he deplored the American institution of slavery. In this he had the sympathy of Thomas Jefferson but apparently not of Benjamin Franklin, who, as shown in Ford's "Many-Sided Franklin," made "many a venture in the purchase and sale of negroes" and announced to the readers of the Pennsylvania Gazette, published in Philadelphia, that by inquiring "of the Printer hereof" they could obtain "a Likely Young Negro Wench," a "Likely Mulatto Girl," a "Likely Young Negro Fellow," etc., according to the stock at the time on hand.

The letter from Washington, date of 1794, seven years after the adoption of our slavery-providing Federal Constitution, was addressed to Alexander Spotswood, who seems to have asked advice about purchasing lands and other investments. In part Washington wrote: "With respect to the other species of property, concerning which you ask my opinion, I shall frankly declare to you that I do not like even to think, much less talk of it. Were it not that I am principled against selling Negroes, as you would do cattle at a market, I would not in 12 months from this date be possessed of one as a slave. I shall be happily mistaken if they are not found to be very troublesome species of property ere many years pass over our heads." As early as 1774 Jefferson wrote in favor of gradual emancipation and colonization, in order to "relieve us of this heavy reproach," but, recognizing the difficulties of the situation, he also wrote that "we have the wolf by the ears and can neither hold him nor safely let him go."

AS EUROPE SEES US.

The United States has been under discussion in Europe rather more than usual of late, though not so much the riches of a colossus threatening to bestride the world as our pious hypocrisy. The English press is rather guarded in its comment on our refusal to let in a foreign divorced woman for a short visit, but the London Telegraph, while not quite permitting itself to describe the American people as hypocritical, ventures to say that we are undeniably given to "high-sounding and loosely-phrased moralizing." Coming more directly to the point, the London Daily News submits that our immigration authorities are acting legally, but inconsistently and rather foolishly, in view of the fact that in three years the United States has put through half a million divorces. In other words, to ignore our own large crop of lively divorcees and to become so upset about a single visitor from abroad smacks of a hypocritical habit of mind.

It is pleasing to find that in the midst of these uncomplimentary appraisements J. St. Loe Strachey, former editor of the London Spectator, fresh from a visit to this country, keeps on saying nice things about us. The last dispatched quotation from him is that "Americans are the most kindly, the most helpful and the most courteous race of people on the face of the earth." Even a hypocrite and a bully might be courteous when it was to his interests, but he could hardly win a reputation for being most kindly and helpful. So there is plainly room among Europeans for wide differences of opinion as to the characteristics of typical Americans.

Reporting that umbrellas had become unfashionable among the youth of France, causing spoiled clothing and endangering health, a Paris newspaper asked the Prince of Wales if he could not do something to mend matters. Promptly the Prince appeared in public carrying a stock [illegible] umbrella folded in an impeccable way, and at once life and [illegible] were restored to a time-honored but of late neglected fashion. A pity that the benevolent and powerful Prince, on account of his sex, is unable to "do something" to bring warmer covering than thin silk stockings upon cold legs during severe winter weather.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

SAVE THE SURFACE.

A prominent dentist now giving all his time to the work of instructing the public on the care of the teeth, tells us that we are spending too much time talking about the teeth of adults.

He admits that bad teeth are responsible for joint, heart, and other ailments of the body, but if more time were spent in teaching the mothers how to care for the children's teeth by proper food, it would make a great difference in after life.

If instead of giving youngsters just soft "mushy" things to eat, they were given food that required a little chewing, then there would be exercise for the jaws which would mean a better "set" to the jaws. Also the circulation about gums would be such that they would be strong and healthy.

Another interesting fact is, that if the teeth of children and adults also were inspected every six months, there would be no decayed teeth. It is the wearing of the enamel that makes a point of entry for the little organisms that cause the decay.

It has been learned that it takes eighteen months, a full year and a half, for the enamel to wear off just to the extent of a pin's point in area. But this tiny area allows the organisms to enter, and it is not long then before the inner part of the teeth surrounding the nerve decays, because it is much softer material.

What is the lesson?

That, just as our paint friends say "save the surface and you save all", so likewise if the enamel is preserved the tooth remains safe. It simply means then that any tiny spot or cavity on a tooth should be cleaned and filled. It may easily go unnoticed by you unless it is where it catches your eye, but the dentist with his head mirror and little mouth mirror, can locate these spots easily and correct the condition. There can be no question but that folks that see their dentists once or twice a year to have their teeth inspected actually spend less money on their teeth than those who wait until the necessity arises, and then require considerable work with the consequent cost.

Today's Story in New York History

Troops and Woodsmen Surprised and Captured by Brant near Fort Schuyler, March 2, 1781.

There were many incursions into the Mohawk Valley during the period of the American Revolution, and those suffered during the spring of 1781 were frequent and costly.

The earliest raid in that year was made in the Saratoga settlements, when the notorious Joe Bettys and several accomplices attacked the home of an aged widow but were captured by Lieutenant Fillmore and two brave neighbors.

Bettys was a native of Saratoga county and joined the Whigs on the breaking out of the Revolution. While a captive in Canada, after Arnold's defeat on Lake Champlain, October 13, 1776, he was induced to join the English troops and was made an ensign. He became notorious as a spy, and having been caught by the Americans, was at one time conducted to the gallows, when Washington granted him a reprieve on condition of his complete reformation.

But Bettys immediately joined the enemy, and for a long time his cold-blooded murders, his plunder and incendiarism made him a terror of the whole region in the neighborhood of Albany.

Bettys and his companions were observed to approach the widow's home and Lieutenant Fillmore got two of his neighbors, named Perknis and Corey, to accompany him, when they surprised the Tories, seized Bettys and found a silver bullet upon him which contained a message from a Canadian officer to Sir Henry Clinton. Bettys was taken to Albany where he was convicted and hung as a spy. This enterprise of Lieutenant Fillmore was one of the most daring performed in the whole war.

Soon after the arrest of Bettys, Colonel James B. Livingston, with his regiment of New York troops, marched up the Mohawk Valley to Fort Plain.

On March 2, Sergeant James Wilkinson, Corporal Samuel Betts and a squad of soldiers, were sent from Fort Schuyler, now Rome, N. Y., to guard a number of woodchoppers, about half a mile distant from that post.

While thus engaged Joe Brant, the Mohawk warrior, came suddenly upon the Americans, with a large body of Indians and Tories, and captured the whole party, except Wilkinson, who fled, amidst a shower of bullets, in safety to the fort.

On the arrival of Wilkinson at the fort, a strong force immediately turned out, and were piloted by him in pursuit of the foe.

Among the captives was David Ogden, who kept an account of his captivity. He wrote that it was an old Indian custom to leave some record of results.

The snow was three feet deep, and Brant took the shoe buckles of his sixteen prisoners, arranging them in pairs by the path to show their number.

The pursuing party found the buckles, but as night was near the chase was given up from fear of an ambuscade, as the numbers of the foe were unknown.

Brant first conducted his prisoners to the Oneida Castle, about sixteen miles west of Utica, where they dug unhusked corn from the snow, and prepared it for the long journey to Fort Niagara.

Ogden also writes that Brant compelled Corporal Betts to drill his men in the tactics as taught by Baron Stuében, which much pleased the Indian warrior.

These captives experienced a long and tedious march to Fort Niagara via the great southwestern route. They crossed Cayuga Lake on the ice. At Niagara they were compelled to run the gauntlet.

Almost immediately after this incursion, two boys, who had gone back of an orchard, only a few hundred yards from Fort Herkimer, to drive home cows, were captured by seven Indians, and hurried off to Canada.

On July 9 occurred the Indian attack at Currytown, and in October was the great raid of Major Ross and Captain Walter N. Butler at the head of seven hundred British and more than a hundred Indians, which proved to be the last raid into the Mohawk Valley.

High Grade But Not High Priced

SUPPOSE YOUR HUSBAND Ever Thought of This?

EVERY man knows that an automobile depreciates in value about 25% a year. Also that a new dress or a new suit depreciates in values about 90% a year.

But, perhaps it has not occurred to the average Lord of the Treasury that a suit of good furniture for the bedroom or the dining room depreciates in value only 5% in that time.

Indeed, if the furniture you buy is designed in the best manner and substantially built, it may even increase in value with the passing of years.

This is not an argument against the wearing of good clothes or the ownership of a good motor car. But is a sound and impressive reason for the buying of high grade furniture.

And it emphasizes the well known fact that the cost of owning good furniture is astonishingly low with the cost of other household requirements.

Then, too, what a paying investment attractive furniture is. Nothing contributes more to the pleasure of entertaining. To one's social prestige and business success. To the joy and dignity of every day home life. To the proper upbringing of one's children.

And yet the ownership of Stock & Cordts furniture is no longer a privilege of the few. Larger buying power and lower operating expense enables us to pass along, to the public, savings in the way of reasonable prices.

These charming suites as you will see from the distinctive selections at our store, are built of rare and beautiful woods, luxuriously finished, and reveal the latest and most distinguished tendencies in furniture design.

If you are looking for beautiful funiture for your home, sturdily built and bearing the trade marks of the world's best makers, and yet moderately and honestly priced, you will find it at our big store, where quality, courtesy and service have not been forgotten.

Bedroom Suites, 4 Pieces, $145 to $750.

150 YEARS AGO

The Origin of the U. S. A.

By Jonathan A. Rawson, Jr.

CLOSING IN ON BOSTON.

"I have been kept in a continual state of anxiety and expectation ever since you left me. It has been said 'tomorrow' and 'tomorrow', for this month, but when the dreadful tomorrow will be, I know not. But hark! The house this instant shakes with the roar of cannon. I have been to the door, and find it is a cannonade from our army."

Washington's army of the United Colonies had at last begun a bombardment of Boston 150 years ago this evening, and the above was in all probability the first record of that event ever put into writing. It was part of a letter written by Abigail Adams to her husband, John Adams, then in Philadelphia as a member of the Continental Congress from Massachusetts.

The Continental army had been cooping up the British army in Boston since the minute men had harried the redcoats back into Boston from Lexington and Concord on April 19, 1775. Now, at last, Washington had become convinced that the enemy did not propose to come out and meet him, and in some way, from somewhere, he had accumulated enough powder and cannon to take matters into his own hands and make the first move toward driving the enemy out. This first move, as described in his own words was: "In order to divert the enemy's attention, we began on Saturday night a cannonade and bombardment, which with intervals was continued through the night; the same on Sunday, and on Monday a continued roar from seven o'clock till daylight was kept up between the enemy and us."

The Americans fully expected that their cannonading would quickly bring on a pitched battle which would probably begin with an attack by General Howe and his Britishers up on the American camp in Cambridge, Dorchester and Roxbury which were across the Charles River from Boston on the land side. If this did not happen, Washington was ready to push his lines still further toward Boston on Dorchester Heights. In any case, there must be some decisive move very soon, for the Americans were without powder enough to keep up a long bombardment. On this first evening of their attack they experienced disaster in the bursting of two thirteen-inch mortars and three ten-inch mortars, perhaps through the excessive zeal of their gunners. They did not have artillery enough to suffer many losses like this without danger to their entire enterprise.

MT. TREMPER.

Mt. Tremper, March 1.—Almost everybody in Mt. Tremper slid to Grange meeting last Friday evening and they were rewarded for their skidding by an interesting, if not entirely joyous evening. Memorial services were held for those who died during the previous year, and books were inscribed and presented to the Memorial Library in memory of James Rion, Mrs. Lottie Lane Scofield and Mrs. May A. Holorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lane were presented with Sixth Degree gold pins in appreciation of their services as our delegates for Ulster county at the State Grange Convention at Watertown. They do the delegating business so well that they have been chosen delegates to the Ulster County Pomona meeting on March 5th. They have all the attributes of a perfect delegate; they look wise, can make a speech, and remember and bring back to the Grange all the jokes and funny stories they hear.

All are delighted with the overseer's memory. The attainments of the new acquisitions make the Grange throw out its chest in pride.

The Grange is always interested in the local church and members of both were gratified to see the increased attendance on Sunday. All but the upholstered seats were taken.

There will be a communion service on Easter Sunday instead of next Sunday as previously announced.

ST. REMY.

St. Remy, March 1.—The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Adrian Van Vliet on Thursday, March 4, at 2:30 p. m. New members and visitors are always welcome.

Mrs. L. Sil[illegible] of New Salem was the guest of Mrs. G. Schroeder on Sunday.

On account of the storm last Thursday evening the social and pictures were not given. It will take place some future time.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ellsworth and daughter, [illegible], were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Terpening of New Salem.

New Organization To Help Veterans

National Stand-By Association Will Assist in Relief and Welfare Work for Benefit of World War Veterans.

Commander Joseph Sills of Kingston Chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, has received from National Commander John W. Mahan of the wounded and disabled veterans' national organization, formal announcement of plans for the formation of a National Stand-By Association to assist the D. A. V. in its nation-wide activities, relief and welfare work.

The Stand-By Association will include in its membership firms and corporations, public-spirited men and women, ex-service men and women, schools and institutions, in every city and town throughout the United States. The association is expected to supervise the national laison and legislative activities of the Disabled American Veterans' organization, which in the six years of its existence, has specialized in representing the wounded and disabled veterans of the nation in handling their claims and appeals for adjudication, hospitalization and rehabilitation assistance from the government.

Extra efforts will be put forth to enlist for the Stand-By Association the moral and financial support of ex-service men in all sections of the country, according to National Commander Mahan's announcement, which stated that less than 10 per cent of the nation's world war veterans are enrolled in any veterans' organization. The Disabled American Veterans claim by far the greatest percentage of enrollments in proportion to eligible veterans, this society restricting its active membership to men wounded, disabled or injured in their country's active service during the world war.

Pointing out that close to 30,000 world war veterans are still in hospitals as a result of their war-time wounds or disabilities, and that approximately 416,000 veterans who sought compensation or training from the government due to disabilities have suffered rejection of their claims, many cases being turned down on only slight or incomplete evidence, the D. A. V. national commander has asserted the vital need for going into these unsatisfied claims on an intensive and diligent scale. The organization also handles extensive relief, welfare, hospitalization, legislative and rehabilitation programs in behalf of the nation's wounded and disabled world war veterans.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.

THE BUMBLED GLIPP.

Although the first glimpse of the glipp nearly frightened Livingstone, the explorer, to death, it is in reality a very harmless creature and it not bothered by the natives of Uganda. About half the size of an elephant, it wanders through the jungles until it comes in sight of a giant bumblebee nest, whereupon it lies on its back and waves its gaily-colored paws through the air. The bumblebees, attracted by what they think is a new kind of flower, gather on the paws and are speedily kicked into its wide-open mouth. When full of angry bees it becomes thoroughly bumbled.

The head of the glipp is a split walnut, with split bean eyes and cloves horns. The body is a filbert and the legs are toothpicks. Polychrome peanut kernels as a rule will do for the paws.

Legion Drive For Membership

American Legion Prepares to Increase Membership Through State-wide Drive—Legion Has Many Things It Seeks to Accomplish.

A concerted state-wide drive to increase the membership of the American Legion in New York state to the highest figure since the war, announced from State Headquarters of the Legion in the Hall of Records, New York city, fixes the quota of each of the sixty-two counties in excess of the largest membership ever enrolled in that county, according to Dr. Edward C. Gow, chairman of the state membership committee.

Dr. Gow also has notified the thousands of ex-service men in New York state that only those whose Legion dues for 1926 and 1927 have been paid will be eligible to the "Second A. E. F.", the 1927 pilgrimage of veterans to the Paris Legion convention and the tours of the Argonne, Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Woods and other battle grounds. Arrangements have already been made for twenty-seven vessels to transport this "Second A. E. F." to France.

"Let us not forget that when we put on the uniform we took the oath of service," declared Dr. Gow, "and that we have assumed obligations and responsibilities which we cannot lay aside with the uniform. We are service men still. Our job is manifold. Rehabilitation of disabled men, hospitalization, veterans' legislation, providing homes for war orphans, maintaining Americanism, aiding the Boy Scouts, developing citizenship among immigrants, decorating the graves of our dead comrades, finding employment for our living comrades, aiding in community betterment—all these are items of our peace-time work and we must not and will not fail."

As a result of Dr. Gow's campaign, many posts are already reporting membership in excess of 1925 and it is expected that New York will pass all previous records in its 1926 membership in the Legion.

"Do I hear a second?" cried the man as the other twin announced its arrival.

Men are more modest than women. You couldn't find a man in his right mind who wouldn't be ashamed to walk the streets half naked.

All men are born free and equal. Marriage, as an institution, comes somewhat later.

"Batter out!" cried the cook, as he fried the last pancake.

Some statistical maniac has estimated that the bumble bee in this country is worth more than all our gold. Maybe so, but, personally, we'd rather handle the gold.

They sat together on the sofa and admired the new engagement ring. She looked at the diamond set and whisperd:

"My, John, isn't it clear?"

"Only two more payments, dear," he replied.

"That guy's the nerviest fellow in town."

"Why?"

"Yesterday he flagged a fire engine and asked for a lift. 'Seeing,' he said, 'as we're both going to the same place.'"

The new settler was busy in his garden with a rake and hoe when his neighbor came along

"I am new to the country and am not too proud to learn," said the newcomer, "and I wish you would give me a bit of advice."

"Certainly," replied the other.

We have often wondered who coined the phrase, "sittin' pretty." Photographers, we guess.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

VALENTINE'S DAY

Melly had been very busy getting ready for St. Valentine's day.

A Very Big Red Heart.

She was making a number of valentines.

Some she made by cutting out hearts from thick red paper, decorating them with little bits of gold hearts which she cut out of thin gold paper.

One valentine was a very big red heart, and all around it were the little gold hearts.

In the center she drew a funny little creature to look like Cupid with a bow and arrow.

In another she put a dagger which was to show that her heart had been pierced by love!

This she sent to her mother.

One with the big red heart and the little gold hearts she sent to her father.

The way she sent her valentines was to go outside the door early on the morning of Valentine's day and shove them into the mail box, and then they would be gathered up a little later when the postman was heard arriving with the letters.

She wrote little verses for a number of her friends, and these she posted in plenty of time so they would arrive on the morning of St. Valentine's day.

She wrote these verses in red ink and drew little hearts on each sheet of paper.

She spread her lines far apart so the valentines would look as though they were long ones.

And the people receiving them would not have to take long to read them, yet they would not seem too short.

This was her valentine for her friend Lucy, and it was written, in this fashion, with the lines far apart:

Lucy with hair so golden
Lucy with ways so fine,
Oh, Lucy, will you, will you
Please, be my Valentine.

This was the valentine she wrote for her friend Caroline who lived nearby:

I have a little neighbor,
Her name is Caroline—
It would make me very happy
If she'd be my Valentine.

This was the valentine she wrote for her friend Mahalia:

I love Mahalia, yes, I do,
And I'll ask her for a sign
That she will be quite willing
To be my Valentine?

Then she sent a valentine she had bought in a shop showing a little boy and a little girl in an automobile with a big heart as a background. She sent this to Muriel, as she knew Muriel loved to go motoring with her daddy, and she knew her daddy took up a big portion of her heart!

The Way She Sent Them.

She wrote one other valentine which she sent to a friend of hers who lived up in the state where it was colder than where Melly lived. This was the valentine to her friend Dolly:

There's a dainty little lady
Who lives way, way "up state,"
She's a darling and a pet,
She's always "up-to-date."
The snow may all surround her,
And it may be very cold,
But it can't freeze my devotion,
For I feel quite brave and bold.
And I ask her now to hearken
As I beg her to be mine
For I want her, oh, so badly,
To be my Valentine!

Where Hole Came From

"Philip," asked a mother of her four-year-old son, "where did that hole in the screen come from?"

"I don't know, mamma," replied the little fellow.

"Are you sure you don't?" she asked.

"Of course I am," answered Philip. "I throwed my ball a while ago and then I saw the hole, but, honestly, I don't know where it came from."

Martha Was Quite Proper

Martha is a proper child, who loves parties with their more formal action.

One day she started for one accompanied by her small, mischievous brother, and eventually she felt doubtful about his actions, for when she reached the door of the party she said to the hostess: "Here is Billy. You better look after him, 'cause it's your fault he was invited."

Simple

Teacher—Can any one tell me how a stovepipe is made?

Johnny—First you take a big, long hole, and then you wrap some tin around it."

HUNTING HARDY CHESTNUTS THAT WILL RESIST BLIGHT

Albany, March 2.—Many inquiries are received at the Conservation Commission, relative to individual chestnut trees or sprouts from such trees which have been killed by the chestnut blight, being immune to this disease.

The chestnut as a timber tree has almost entirely disappeared from its northernmost range in New England and New York and it is being rapidly exterminated southward. Such complete destruction of a forest tree by a disease is not known to have previously occurred in the memory of man.

Efforts are being made to find American chestnut trees which may be resistant to the chestnut blight. A tree to be considered resistant must have had the blight present in its vicinity for ten years or more. It is very doubtful if a completely immune tree can be found, but it is highly desirable to know of chestnut trees which are apparently resisting the blight. Such trees should have a considerable portion of the top and branches still alive and have had the blight for at least five years or more.

Any person who has an opportunity to make observations which may lead to the finding of resistant chestnut trees should keep this matter in mind. The Conservation Commission will be glad to receive notes concerning apparently resistant chestnut trees. These trees will be visited and carefully examined so far as possible with the hope that really resistant trees may be located. If such trees are found cuttings and nuts will be taken from them with the purpose of breeding immune trees. This will take time but the American chestnut as a timber tree is of such value as to warrant every possible attempt for replacing it on a forestry basis.

The few remaining partly living trees should not be cut too closely. Clean cutting of all such trees will prevent their standing long enough to show any real resistance to the blight. In cutting, one or two such trees should be left to fight out their battle with the blight and give us real resistant trees if there is such a possibility.

Farm Machinery Repair Week

Has Been Designated for the Week of March 15 by Commissioner Pyrke—N. Y. State Implement Dealers to Cooperate.

With the tools in use one hundred years ago all of the population of the United States with 35,000,000 added could be required to produce the wheat the American farmer grew in 1924.

Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke of the Department of Farms and Markets in designating the week of March 15 as "Farm Machinery Repair Week" pointed to this as indicative of the importance of farm machinery in production. The commissioner stated that "Farm Machinery Repair Week" is to be observed in this state at the same time that "Better Machinery Week" is to be observed throughout the United States and Canada.

In cooperation with other agricultural agencies, the Department of Farms and Markets will strive to interest farmers generally in placing their machinery and farm equipment in the best of repair. The New York State Implement Dealers' Association will cooperate during the week of March 15. Commissioner Pyrke pointed out that it is important to economic production that farm machinery be kept in good repair.

Farm machinery with proper care and housing may be made serviceable for a long term of years, but if neglected may cause a loss not only in deterioration but in reduced or inferior production. In the blustery days of March, the Department holds, is the proper time for seeing that the woodwork is painted, that worn or broken castings are replaced by new ones, and that all of the implements to be used in the spring be examined as to their condition and readiness for the busy agricultural season.

Through the efforts of the Department of Farms and Markets "Farm Machinery Repair Week" was observed for the first time in New York state last year.

Charles H. Baldwin, director of the Bureau of State Institution Farms, will have supervision of "Farm Machinery Repair Week" in New York state. Mr. Baldwin points out that eastern farmers, on account of the scarcity of labor, use more machinery and have more money per acre invested in farm machinery than farmers in sections remote from the manufacturing centers. "Farm Machinery Repair Week," he added, which is observed in this state in connection with "Better Machinery Week" is to encourage the better care of machinery and its repair. Liberal use of the oil-can, the wrench and paint brush are urged for "Farm Machinery Repair Week."

NEW COUNTERFEIT NATIONAL BANK NOTE

The Treasury Department describes a new counterfeit as follows:

$5 National Bank Note.

On the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, Mo., series 1902; check letter "C"; face plate number 4; back plate number 1253; W. T. Vernon, register of the treasury; Lee McClung, treasurer of the United States; portrait of Ben Harrison; charter number 4178; bank number A223730, upper right and lower left corners.

This counterfeit is printed from zinc-etched plates on two pieces of paper between which threads have been distributed in imitation of the silk fibre. The seal and charter number are printed in dull blue. The back is executed in a dark shade of green ink which gives the note a muddy appearance. The face, however, is fairly deceptive, particularly the portraiture. The signatures of the bank officials form a part of the face plate, being printed out in the same operation. Care should be exercised in handling notes of this description.

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 2.—It was evident that considerable liquidation was overhanging the market today and that the bold and confident bearish traders were ready and anxious to take advantage of that situation. Continuing their attacks on stocks which have thus far registered small proportional losses from last November's high points, the bears easily carried off the honors of the day, while the bulls were sorely pressed to protect themselves.

Savage Arms, which had previously been boosted to 102 and closed yesterday at 86, dropped abruptly to 75 for a further loss of 11 points. United Drug declined 8 points to 137; Dupont 4 points to 213; National Power & Light, 6; Foundation Company, 4. The bears had a smaller measure of success in the standard dividend paying rails and industrials, due largely to the fact that these stocks have already shrunk considerably from the high prices of the year and from peaks which were more in accordance with real values than the highly-inflated and grossly manipulated stocks which recently dropped so abruptly from their lofty perches. United States Steel, Hudson Motor, Baldwin and General Electric refused to be dislodged from their current scale of market values, and American Can sold a few points higher than at Monday's close.

A decline in call money rates to 4½ per cent, was the first indication in a week or more of an easier trend in money, following the completion of the March settlements. Business and industrial conditions were practically unchanged.

Extending their activities to the public utility stock in the early afternoon, following the 30-point drop in United Light & Power on the Curb market, the bears found a number of insecure price structures which were easily overthrown, American Waterworks lost 8½ points; Standard Gas and Electric dropped five; Columbia Gas and Electric five; North American Corporation five; Philadelphia Company three; Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, Electric Power & Light certificates dropped abruptly to 18 for a loss of seven points. This is the widest break sustained by the public utility stocks in the current move, with the exception of the eight-point decline in Consolidated Gas last week.

Nuts Classed as Fruits

In botany the fruit of a flowering plant is the matured seed vessel, and its contents together with such accessory parts as become finally incorporated with them. Thus in a botanical sense not only apples, grapes, etc., but all berries, nuts, grains, beans, pumpkins, cucumbers, etc., are fruits. Popular usage has become much narrower. The grains have been dropped, and the tendency is to drop nuts also, so that a fruit is now generally understood to be the fleshy, juicy product of some plant which when ripe is edible without cooking and adapted to use as a dessert.

Life's Span Extended

In 1800 the average length of life was thirty-three years, in 1855 it was forty years and in 1920 it was fifty-eight years. Actuaries of the large insurance companies report that within the last 30 years the span of human life has been lengthened ten years. The great decrease in the death rate is due primarily to the better preservation and care of infant life, but the actual longevity of man has been advanced. According to Mr. Mayo the virility of man has also been extended over a longer period.

Unkind Comparison

"You used to tell me I was birdlike," complained the fond wife.

The brutal husband continued to bury his nose in the paper.

"You used to tell me I was birdlike," repeated the fond wife, "but now you never act as if you thought so."

"You're still birdlike," growled the brutal husband.

"One wouldn't think you thought so, to judge by—"

"Isn't a parrot a bird?"

The First-Aid Girl

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

BILL OTIS, was talking emphatically over the telephone in his private office which he, as recently appointed costs expert for Walter & Dawkins, had occupied for less than two weeks. As he hung up the receiver he looked at his hand and saw drops of blood on his fingers. Then he remembered that in the heat of his argument he had brought it down hard on the keen-pointed paper spike.

"Anyone got any cotton for bandages here?" he asked of a young clerk who happened to be passing.

"You'll get it from the first-aid girl down at the last desk," said the clerk. "She's got all those things—aromatic spirits of ammonia when anyone faints."

Bill Otis, still holding his handkerchief firmly around his finger to hide scarlet stains, went to the last desk in the large main office. A young girl who seemed to be very busy making records in several enormous books sat there and Bill hoped sincerely that she was the first-aid girl, for he had noticed her several times before.

"It's just a scratch," Bill said. "Give me a little bandaging, if you don't mind."

"You'd better go back in your office," said the girl. "I'll follow."

Two minutes later Bill was seated in his large armchair with this very pretty girl beside him. With immaculate white and shapely hands she was bathing the finger that had been cut—using sterile cotton and a little white enamel cup. Then she took Bill's large hand in hers, and looking at it almost tenderly asked him if it didn't hurt. "It was a rather bad tear," she told him. "I think I should have fainted." She applied some healing salve on a bit of sterile cotton and then neatly bandaged it.

The next day in passing the desk of the first-aid girl, Bill Otis stopped to thank her for her trouble. He likewise asked her her name. Margaret Clark, she told him. He told her she was a born nurse.

"Really I'm not," she said. "I've always hated anything like that. But when I took this job the first-aid kit seemed to go with the desk. They said that the girl that sat at this desk always had had it. Someone had to be responsible—and so I took it. Nothing ever happened like this before, though," she said, rather proud that at last she had been called upon to show her skill. "You see I thought something might happen, so I took an evening course in first aid."

More than ever Bill Otis admired this girl at the end desk, and every time he passed he made some mental observation of her. She was dressed so smartly, her hair was always so smooth and glossy and well brushed.

A few days later he sent her a large bunch of violets with a card inclosed, saying simply, "From a grateful patient." By that time the office people were talking pleasantly about Margaret Clark and Bill Otis. Meantime Bill Otis tried as best he could to gain the friendship of this young girl whom he so much admired, but all quite unsuccessfully. Then one day, feeling more chagrin than usual at his lack of success, he quite deliberately scratched his hand with the paper spike—it was enough to draw one drop of blood, no more. He went out to Margaret's desk and asked her for help, displaying proudly the drop of blood on his finger. Margaret went to his office with her kit. But after that she barely spoke when he passed her desk.

Then one day something really did happen. Bill Otis in his office alone went to raise the heavy swinging window. Through a defect in the chain that was supposed to hold the window it fell with a crashing thud on Bill's arm. As he turned to go back to his desk the walls seemed to bend and the furniture went swimming round the room. Bill tried to raise him arm and almost fainted.

"Perhaps spirits of ammonia would pull me around until I got out of here," he said to himself and with all the fortitude he could muster went to the door and asked the girl nearest him to ask Miss Clark to come in with her first aid. The girl laughed and Bill shut the door and staggered over to his chair.

Bill doesn't remember just what happened then, except that he made Margaret understand that he wanted to pull himself together so as to be able to get away without anyone in the office knowing that he had been hurt. It was the ammonia spirits that she mixed up that gave him the strength he needed—that and the promise that if he could get to the main entrance she'd meet him there.

She came and, summoning a taxi, drove with him to the nearest hospital, where the doctors gave him ether and learned that he had sustained a compound fracture of the arm.

As Bill opened his eyes and felt the slow, dull pangs of pain return there was Margaret Clark, his first-aid girl, beside him.

"I know I'm only a first aid," she said apologetically, "but I wanted to see you through." The pallor on her pretty cheeks told Bill that her ordeal had not been an easy one.

Bill murmured something. He tried to tell her that he loved her and to ask her to marry him, but she did not understand. Two weeks later when the arm was in fair shape again he repeated these words and this time Margaret understood.

English Woman Deported Quietly

Sent Home from Boston Without Attracting Attention—Criticises American Immigration Authorities and Station.

Liverpool, March 2.—While the world was aroused over the case of Vera, Countess of Cathcart, Mrs. Selina Chippendale, a widow of 57, was being quietly deported from Boston on charges of moral turpitude and no one paid any attention to her case, but today she arrived here and let loose with a withering blast against the American immigration authorities and the Boston immigration station.

Nation-wide attention has been attracted by the charges made by Mrs. Chippendale. "Conditions in the Boston immigration station are such that if a woman wanted to be decent they wouldn't let her," said Mrs. Chippendale. "The station is swarming with cockroaches."

Mrs. Chippendale said she had been in Boston since 1922, but that seven months ago the immigration authorities had notified her that she had entered illegally and must leave and that eventually she had been deported.

Anita Stewart An American

Renounces Her Titles and Regains Her American Citizenship After Lapse of 17 Years.

Newport, R. I., March 2.—Anita Stewart today regained her American citizenship after a lapse of 17 years, renouncing her titles of Princess and Countess De Braganza.

Miss Stewart, in 1909 married the Prince Miguel De Braganza, an Austrian, automatically becoming thereby a subject of the then Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Today, in superior court here, with her left hand lovingly caressing the flag of her native land and her right uplifted toward Heaven Miss Stewart took the oath of allegiance to the United States, giving up all titles.

Three children were born to the Braganzas. The Prince died three years ago and it was because of the children, whom she wished to be brought up as true Americans that she renounced all titles and became once more a plain American citizen.

About the Folks

Mrs. Merrill C. Liscomb of 214 Greenkill avenue is confined to her home with a nervous breakdown.

Geraldine Moore, of the Academy of Mercy at Albany, is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. E. Moore, in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Middaugh of 167 Pine street returned Sunday to their home after spending a few days at Utica, N. Y.

Miss Dorothy Dohnken, who has been confined to her home for the past week with a severe case of tonsilitis, is improving under the care of Dr. F. L. Eastman.

Sounds to Control Fires

The use of sound waves as fire extinguishers and a weapon in warfare is called a possibility by Howard Cooley, civilian director for the chemical warfare service in the New England district.

"It is possible in time that the tone wave of every building in a great city could be ascertained and at a central fire station a tuning fork would be set up," Mr. Cooley says. "In case of fire the tuning fork would be vibrated and in a few minutes the fire would be extinguished.

"That [illegible] is extravagant, but [illegible] to see it done."

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

FREDDIE WANTS TO TELL

AS SOON as Kiddie Katydid mentioned the word music, Freddie Firefly began to dance and shout.

"There!" he cried. "You've just the same as told me that I was right. If you sang your "Katy did, Katy did; she did, she did," you would call it singing. But since you make that ditty by rubbing your wing covers together, it is music. And you just referred to it as such!"

Well, Kiddie Katydid couldn't say a single word. Freddie Firefly was right. They both knew it. And the secret was hopelessly "out." In fact, it was a secret no longer—unless Kiddie Katydid could persuade Freddie Firefly to keep the news to himself.

And He Flitted Away, Feeling Somewhat Peeved.

"You won't say anything about this little matter, I hope," Kiddie began.

"Won't I?" said Freddie Firefly. "Why, I just couldn't help telling people what I've learned! It's the biggest bit of news that I've known since I've lived in Pleasant Valley. And I must get word of it to old Mr. Crow somehow."

"Why Mr. Crow?" Kiddie Katydid inquired anxiously. He knew that the old gentleman was a great gossip. "You might as well put this in a newspaper as tell old Mr. Crow about it."

"Ah! That's just the point!" cried Freddie. "Mr. Crow is a newspaper. Perhaps you didn't know it; but every Saturday he flies over Blue mountain to the pond where Brownie Beaver lives and tells Brownie all the news of the past week."

"Then for pity's sake, don't let him hear of this!" Kiddie begged.

But nothing could have stopped Freddie Firefly.

"You're too modest," he said. "It's a shame to be able to make music the way you do and not let the neighbors know it. Why, the first thing you know you'll be one of the most famous people in this whole valley."

"But I don't want to be!" Kiddie Katydid cried. "I'm not like you. You go dancing about every night, flashing your light so everyone can see you. But I stay among the trees and shrubs. And I even wear a green suit—which matches the color of the leaves—so people won't notice me. Of course," Kiddie added, "I don't mind if the public hears my music. But I don't care to be seen, as a rule. And I don't like callers a bit!"

"You don't, eh?" remarked Freddie Firefly. "Then it's time for me to be moving along. For I never stay where I'm not welcome." And he flitted away, feeling somewhat peevish—and all the more determined to get the news of the discovered secret to Mr. Crow at the earliest possible moment.

How he was going to do that he didn't quite know.

There was little chance of his seeing Mr. Crow, for the old gentleman only waked up at the time Freddie Firefly was ready to go to bed—about dawn.

He was pondering over his difficulty, which bothered him not a little, when a terrific croaking from the direction of the swamp reached his ears. It was the final chorus of the Frog family's nightly singing party. And it promptly put an idea into Freddie Firefly's head.

"I'll hurry right over there and speak to Mr. Frog, the well-known tailor," he said to himself. "He knows old Mr. Crow. He sees him almost every day. And he'll be glad to give the old gentleman a message."

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

SHIELA

THE Irish, to whom Shiela undoubtedly belongs, prefer to spell the graceful name, Sheelah. Either form is correct and the fortunate bearer of the name, growing weary of one version, may turn to the other without fear of affectation. Shiela means "blind." It comes from the old Roman and is popular in Italy in modern times in the guise of Zilia or Celia.

Its earliest origin was among the Coelian gens, founded by the Etruscan general Coeles Vivenna, who also named the Coelian hill. The wives in Venice adopted Zilia in honor of this war hero and the name spread to Naples where it appeared as Lilloia. Just why it should have appealed to the Irish is not clearly understood, unless they, like the French, believed that it had some connection with the heavens, or sky, whose Latin term is "coelum." Thus a blue-eyed Irish girl might easily have been called Sile or Sheelah under the romantic Keltic idea that the sky was reflected in her lovely orbs.

Curiously enough, Shiela spread throughout England. It is very popular there today, but it is rarely spelled Sheelah.

The turquoise is Shiela's talismanic gem. It is believed to bring her true love and a happy marriage. Monday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

THREE BROTHERS

ASK any man totally ignorant of his ancestry for any distance back, and the chances are ten to one he will tell you: "There were three brothers came over, one settled in such a place" and then he gives the place of settlement of the three. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred this is not true and moreover the man has no actual reason to suppose it so. But he firmly believes it. The three brothers' ancestry is in fact a superstition which seems to be thoroughly ingrained in the human race—for what reason it is hard to say; probably its source lies in the old magic of arithmancy. Nations as well as individuals and families look to the "three brothers" as the source of their existence and have done so as far back as history and tradition can take us.

Perhaps the Biblical story of the three brothers, sons of Noah, who continued the human race after the flood, may account in some measure for the persistence of the three brothers legend today. But it must be observed that Hesiod speaks of three brothers, the offspring of the union of earth and heaven, from whom the human race is descended; and the ancient Germans declared that their various tribes were all descended from three brothers. And so on illustrations might be multiplied. In fact from most ancient times men and nations when of untraced origin have been accustomed to begin the legend of their genesis with the words: "There were three brothers."

THE QUESTION

TO BE or not to be? That is no question.
Unless, perchance, you have the indigestion—
Never to know the joy of love and life?
Never to know the thrill of conquering strife?
Never to taste the bliss of mastery
Over the things of earth, and air and sea?
Never to feel? Never to know the Spring?
Never to laugh, never to dance or sing?
Never to suffer pain for other's sake?
Never to sleep and dream, never to wake?
No question there. Whate'er may a-distress
No being would be drop for nothingness!

Flowers Should Be Kept Busy

Delaney, Dave Shade, Walker and Greb, Defunct Champion, Mentioned As Opponent of Newly Decorated Middleweight Champion.

(By Davis J. Walsh)

New York, March 2. That matter of race, creed, color and previous condition of servitude, I understood, was straightened out during the bit of unpleasantness that occurred around 1861, but it seems that mistakes will happen.

Four nights ago, Tiger Flowers, the colored gentleman, won the world's middleweight title from a white man and today the panic was on The boys were all in a lather over the question of finding a Nordic middleweight capable of relieving the Tiger of his title and indications were that another "White Hope" epidemic was about to annoy the populace.

It probably will prove less virulent than that early plague of the post-Jeffries and pro-Willard era, for two reasons; first, Flowers appears certain to lose his title, anyhow, in the natural course of events and, second, present-day fans seems to exercise more intelligence and less hysteria about this nonsense. The echo of the decision against Harry Greb was still in the air when they began to talk about what Jack Delaney would do to Flowers. They wanted to train Jack down to 160 pounds and, send him out to repeat his knockouts over the Tiger If Delaney, after making heroic efforts to build himself up to the light heavyweight division can tear himself down to the middleweights and be strong, there seems little doubt that he could win the title. Flowers is made to measure for a right-hander and Delaney either is that or horse radish lacks authority.

However, Delaney's haste to file a challenge has not been sufficient to alter the fact that 9 3-5 seconds is the world's record for 100 yards

Dave Shade another plausible gent, seems to be in no great rush, either. David, they say, could outpunch and outspeed the Tiger without getting too serious about the problem. Mickey Walker the welterweight champion, also has been mentioned in this connection and so has Harry Greb the defunct champion.

The Tiger can look forward to a busy summer.

Ring Classic at Madison Garden

Battle Between Loayza and McGraw on Bronx Hospital Card One of Most Sensational Ever Staged in New York.

New York, March 2 Stanislaus Loayza, a savage little battler from Chile, with black hair and beady eyes, and Phil McGraw, an aggressive, clean-cut young Greek from Detroit, crawled through the ropes in a ring at Madison Square Garden last night and staged one of the most sensational fights ever witnessed in New York.

"A ring classic," fans were united in describing it today.

Loayza was given the decision after the bout had gone the limit, ten rounds

The fight had been advertised as a "Natural," a battle worth going to see. It was. Sixteen thousand fans packed the Garden and were in an uproar throughout the fight.

So fiercely did Loayza and McGraw mix it that on at least three occasions they paid no attention to the clang of the gong at the end of the round, and stood toe to toe and laid their punches in. For pure, unadulterated action, the bout was unexcelled in years

Loayza won six of the ten rounds. Few thought the fight would go the limit, so fast was the pace, and several times both boys were on the verge of a knockout

The tide of battle shifted back and forth, and frequently changed with abrupt suddenness. The fans were calling on one, then the other, to score the knockout, and there was absolutely no semblance of order while the battle was in progress

When the opening bell rang, they jumped to the center of the ring and whaled each other with all they had. When the end bell rang they paid no attention to it. They both sent back half a dozen punches for good measure and the referee had to break them.

McGraw showed dazzling speed and cleverness. Loayza had great speed, too, and a Pancho Villa-like "will to kill," a sort of primitive love of battle, fighting like a cornered bobcat. Of the two, Loayza was the most awkward, but he had a terrific, slashing left which repeatedly landed and reddened the right side of McGraw's face.

The cruel-lipped Chilean took the first, second and third rounds, by a slight margin. McGraw, however, came back desperately and shooting rights and lefts from all angles, had the South American in bad shape in the fourth.

Undaunted, Loayza went on another punching spree and won the fifth. McGraw took the next two, repeatedly rushing to the ropes and pummeling him with both hands.

The eighth and ninth went to the seemingly tireless Loayza, who had been shooting back almost as much as he had been taking in the previous two rounds.

Both boys were on the verge of collapse as they went through the tenth, which was McGraw's round. Loayza took one on the chin and was almost out But he had piled up a lead early in the fight, and the battle was his.

Both fighters were floored during the sensational scrap. Loayza was floored in the third round when McGraw caught him off his balance, shooting a right to the button. The Chilean leaned up without a count. Then, in the fourth, McGraw went down under the impact of Loayza's left hooks and right swings, but he disdained a count. In the sixth Loayza went down again, hit by a left in the stomach. He took a count of six and came back fighting as furiously as ever In the seventh, McGraw went down, partly as a result of a slip and aided by a terrific left hook to the chin. In the tenth, at the very finish, Loayza was almost out. Loayza weighed 133¾. McGraw, 132¾.

The other fights on the card, which was for the benefit of the Bronx Hospital, were also thrilling.

Joe Dundee, Baltimore's wonderful welterweight title challenger, knocked out Tommy Freeman of Hot Springs, Ark., in the fifth round; Mushy Callahan, speedy coast lightweight, was given a draw with Archie Walker of Brooklyn, ten rounds, although Mushy seemed to have the best of it, and Carl Duane won a ten round decision from Joe Malone, settling the "Championship of the Bronx."

MISS WILLS WINS MATCH IN MENTONE TOURNAMENT.

Mentone, France, March 2.—Strange courts and new climatic and light conditions proved no obstacle to Miss Helen Wills today when she made her first appearance in the Mentone tournament.

The American girl defeated Miss Dorothy Hammerton of England 6-0, 6-4.

Miss Wills will meet either Mlle. Didi Vlastor or Senorita Alvarez in the finals, it is predicted, and she has already demonstrated her ability to easily defeat either of these players.

Bruck Tells How McNally Outfit Was Whipped.

Kingston, N. Y., March 2, 1926.

Dear Sir:

Kindly allow me a little space to answer McNally's letter which appeared in Monday's issue of The Freeman. His statement that his team was beaten by unfair decisions is false and ungrounded. The field basket made by myself with three minutes to go was not made from out of bounds. The ball was already in and out of the basket when I was pushed by one of his own players and forced to step over the line.

He is also incorrect about the referee. For it was he and not Referee McGrane who did not see the play.

McNally should also remember that all the games played at St. Mary's are forty minute games and not thirty-nine. This would allow the foul made by Van Buren to count.

I am sure the St. Mary's team is ready at any time to show their superiority over McNally and his All Stars.

Thanking you for valuable space and hoping a third game will be arranged.

I am yours in sport,
PETER J. BRUCK,
Member of St. Mary's Team.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

"Braveheart," which is a great photoplay, made a good impression at Reade's Kingston Theatre Monday night where it is playing a two day engagement. The story deals with the love of an Indian for a white girl and of his great sacrifice for her. It is a charming blend of wigwam and college life and there are many scenes of rare dramatic power that thrill and amaze. The other features are the late news reel and the comedy sensation Also Jimmie Connors and his excellent orchestra render a colorful musical program.

Local film fans have but one more opportunity after tonight to see the Fox screen version of Channing Pollock's greatest stage play, "The Fool," at the Opera House Tomorrow it finishes its engagement after breaking attendance records so far and achieving a reputation as one of the finest, most entertaining and cleanest pictures that has ever been seen in this city There is also the latest news reel and "Our Gang" in "Shootin' Injuns" packed with laughing entertainment from beginning to the end.

Irving Lewis and his Nifties of Broadway Company, which will appear at the Orpheum Theatre all this week, has been pronounced one of the best, most whimsical and fascinating musical reviews now before the public. It is charged with an electrical animation that blazes forth with mirth. The magnetic brigade of choristers were chosen not only for beauty but talent as well. The scenery, costumes and electrical effects are in abundance and consistent with the entire artistry of the revue. Mr. Lewis, who owns and produces the show and is the chief funmaker, has surrounded himself with a clever cast of principals. The vaudeville portion is well supplied with talented artists

At the Auditorium, Marguerite Snow, June Elvidge, Ramsay Wallace, Helen Ferguson, Priscilla Bonner and Rex Lease are seen in "Chalk Marks," a drama of love and serivce.

PEDESTRIANS RESPONSIBLE FOR MANY AUTO ACCIDENTS.

Pedestrians are responsible for a great many automobile accidents, says W. H. Cameron, managing director of the National Safety Council, Chicago.

Some of them need guardians to escort them across the streets. Too many jay walkers ramble about without restraint, crossing thoroughfares where it is most convenient for them to do so, getting in the way of motorists who have the right of way and generally clogging up traffic. Very often motorists have to suddenly pull into curbs to avoid striking jay walkers, endangering their own lives and property, only to be greeted with unkind words by the thoughtless pedestrians. One wonders what these careless people are thinking about when they walk in front of fast moving traffic, without stopping, looking or listening

Too many pedestrians do not appreciate their own responsibility but place it all on motorists. To educate them is one of our tasks, a problem that faces every safety advocate actively engaged in accident prevention work. Pedestrian traffic must be standardized and the sooner it is done the better it will be for the nation. There should be uniform laws for pedestrians just as many communities have standard traffic regulations for motorists. The burden of responsibility should not be placed upon either the motorist or the pedestrian alone for if this is done the other will run wild. It is just as important to teach the pedestrian to keep from being hit as it is to educate the motorist from striking him. In other words what is needed is sort of a motorist-pedestrian partnership.

It is more important for the pedestrian to be careful than the motorist for it is usually the pedestrian who is injured in an automobile accident. Of the 21,000 men, women and children killed by automobiles during 1925 two-thirds of this number were pedestrians.

Death is so permanent!

Tonight at the St. Mary's court the Holy Name team of Wilbur will clash with the Senior Holy Name team of St. Mary's. The Saints are out for revenge for the trimming they received at the hands of the Holy Name squad. The Saints are confident they can trample over the Wilbur outfit, while Coach Cragin's men are sure they can repeat the feat of last week. The line up for the Saints will be the same as last week with Feeney, Hinkley, Murphy, Noonan, Fitzgerald, Ryan and Leonard. The Holy Name squad will use their regular line up with McArdle and Black in the front, Feidler center and Daugherty and Lynch, guards.

Pine Hill, March 1.—Dwight Warren of Milton, spent a couple of days in town last week with his sister, Mrs. S. Townsend.

Mr and Mrs. A D. Hill, who have been spending the past two months in Florida, returned home last week

Several from this place attended the Firemen's Dance at Fleischmann's last Monday evening

Mrs. Harry Johnson of Kingston visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George France, over the week-end.

The youngsters in town have been enjoying the coasting down the Pine Hill road and on the sidewalks during the past week.

C. H. Griffin, who has been spending the past few weeks in New York, has returned to Pine Hill.

The old boarding house formerly owned by Isaac Smith, at Smithville about two miles from this village was discovered to be on fire last Thursday and was burned to the ground. The place has not been occupied for a number of years and was of little value. It is understood that the property belonged to Herbert Lasher of Fleischmanns, and last fall he sold the building to Abram Lasher for $50, who expected to tear it down and save what good lumber he could find.

Mrs. Henry Myers of Highmount suffered a second stroke of paralysis one day last week. The shock was a slight one, and it is reported that she is slowly recovering under the care of Dr. E. Champlin of Fleischmanns
